Every tree counts!

Talking won't stop glaciers from melting! Therefore we children and young people of Plant-for-the-Planet are calling on every person to plant 150 trees each. A tree absorbs at least 200 kg CO₂ during its lifetime.

If everybody joins in, there will be 1,000 billion new trees. There is enough space to plant them without competing with settlement and agricultural areas. With this amount of trees, a quarter of today's human-made CO₂ emissions can be absorbed. That's what scientists from the Crowther Lab at the ETH Zurich have found out.

Thank you for planting trees with us.

By the way, as a child, you can easily join Plant-for-the-Planet and become a Climate Justice Ambassador. Register for an Academy: plant-for-the-planet.org.
